1. Write the code to define a class `Shoe` representing shoes. Shoes have a numeric size (1, 1.5, 2, 2.5, ...) and a color (you can use a string for that). Your class should use encapsulation for the instance variables. It should also have a constructor with appropriate arguments to initialize the instance variables. Don't worry about a `toString` method. Include a short `main` method illustrating the use of your class (creating an instance and doing something with it).
